

Blue-cap

Blue-caps are mining fairies. In the pits the miners only ever see their blue caps glowing in the dark but praise their willingness to do a fair days work for a fair days pay. Unafraid of hard manual work they will reward those who treat them well.

Redshank

Redshanks are guardians of forgotten treasure, looking after it until it is found again. They are so called because of their reddish clothes which have been dyed by the red clays that line the tunnel walls that lead to the treasure chambers.

Fairy Princess

Little is known of the fairy royalty as they live below the ground. A Fairy princess will only surface on Mid-summers eve when she takes flight on a Blackbird to visit her subjects throughout Fairyland. So on Mid-summers eve, if you see a Blackbird in your garden, look very hard, there could be a Fairy Princess nearby.

Fairy Prince and Princess

From Tylwyth Teg this royal pair, love the ones with golden hair. They dwell from where the water springs, and love to dance and make fairy rings. The young princess might readily wed, a mortal man with the fairest head. A bounteous gift is swift retaken, if their trust should be forsaken.

Fairy (frog) Prince

Following his encounter with the evil Enchantress the hapless prince is destined to tarry ever more in a pond unless a Fairy Princess should chance by and release him from this heinous spell.

Jack Frost

When cold still weather is at hand, fairy dust is sprinkled all over the land. In the morning when all is white. We know Jack Frost has been in the night.

Hob

Hobs are kindly but occasionally mischievous. They are generally found in the Midlands, living in Hob-holes in natural caves. A speciality of curing whooping cough would bring parents and their children into his cave to whisper: "Hobhob Hob! Hobhob Hob! Ma Bairns gotten t' kink cough Tak t' off; tak t' off" and a cure was as good as effected.

Henkie

Henkies are Shetland Trows. These little sprites love to dance, their dancing is very weird, they clasp their hands around their knees and leap up and down with their heads bobbing to and fro!

Sih Ffrit

A Sih Ffrit will do your chores, but you must abide by all her sores. If her name you know what it be, then her kindly help you 'll get for free.

Fairy Baby

A fairy baby for luck and good fortune.

Fairy God-mother

The Fairy God-mother brings good luck to those she watches over
